

The search for a government relations professional creates a set of unique challenges, particularly for those without an in-depth knowledge of the federal legislative arena. Often the ideal candidate possesses a distinct combination of attributes that can be tough to find.

With particular expertise in navigating the lobbying world in Washington, The McCormick Group works closely with clients to identify and recruit top-notch candidates who bring relevant political experience and knowledge of issues. Our consultants live and breathe politics and policy and are able to tap into their extensive networks of contacts to surface exceptional candidates for each engagement. Finally, one of the hallmarks of The McCormick Group is our ability to effectively articulate the opportunity to the candidate who offers the best fit for the position.

Clients include law firms, lobbying firms, public affairs firms, corporations, and associations. The McCormick Group also represents select senior government officials and staff looking to transition to the private sector. Among those represented include a number of high level government officials, including two outgoing Cabinet Secretaries. Beyond executive search, we offer clients a wide range of consulting services.
